This Land is a powerful, funny and gripping documentary film from South Africa that follows a young man's journey home to the village where he was born and nurtured through the turbulent, violent and difficult years of the Apartheid era. His name is Tendayi, and he is a former prison inmate turned barber with a belief in justice and dignity. Like a priest, he cuts hair and leads his shaven flock in a new way of life, grooming them for adulthood by preparing them for their first haircuts in four years. One by one the men are brought to him for "education", and like a guru or a parent, they come to learn about their culture. While exploring his roots, Tendayi discovers what he has long sought, the strength and love of his village community. Unable to cope with the trauma of his past, yet yearning for a sense of belonging and acceptance, he returns to his community to discover that it has changed since he was a child. Enlisting a small group of mavericks who share his vision, Tendayi pays homage to his youth, holding a community event at which the long, flowing and beautiful locks of his childhood past are ceremonially reunited and respectfully buried.. Lehr, supra, with respect to the Cemented Vetco thing. These are violations of the law. They are as plain as day. If it had not been for the blatant infractions of the law I would not have been dilatory at all." The trial court has inherent power to declare a forfeiture of bail as punishment for a forfeiture thereof, and the record herein amply supports the trial court's finding. (People v. Williams, supra.) [8] Appellant argues that the record does not contain sufficient evidence to find as a matter of law that he was the person who was chiefly responsible for the described violations. This argument is without merit, for there is ample evidence in the record to support the finding. The judgment and the order denying the motion for a new trial are affirmed. 3e33713323
