Screensavers VR is a collection of virtual reality screensavers inspired by the longest running screensaver category-- desktop wallpapers. Our goal is to celebrate the classic desktop wallpaper and bring it to the next dimension, by creating a collection of VR screensavers. But let's get back to some classics... These are some of our favourites, taken all of the way to their limits in virtual reality. We didn't just bring them back, we brought them to the next level. All this is accomplished through strong visual and gameplay experiences that are completely unique to this project and give you a new perspective on these traditional screensavers. Did we mention that many of them are completely VR-only? This project became so successful that we decided to bring them out into the world as a VR "collection." Screensavers VR is the largest collection of modern, VR-only screensavers and if you're looking for a little bit of nostalgia and escape with new, free releases, we'd love to have you join us. Follow us on Facebook: Instagram: Twitter: Youtube: Our sister site: Risks and challenges We've worked really hard with the artists and designers to bring you the best screensavers we can. We've got tons of new screensavers coming out in the next year, and we'd hate to miss them because we couldn't meet this deadline. However, we think this is a minor issue, and we're confident that we'll be able to keep up with the release schedule.

A possible increase in the incidence of multiple sclerosis in Denmark. The recent increase in the incidence of multiple sclerosis in Denmark was analyzed to study any possible effect of the increase in the proportion of persons with a non-Danish citizenship (19.2% in 1976, 30.5% in 1987). The incidence rate of definite or probable multiple sclerosis was not found to have increased significantly and there was no difference in the male:female ratio (2.3:1) or in the age at diagnosis (median 41). The effect size among animal studies was considerable (≥ 0.5) in 11 of the 15 animal studies. However, effect size among human studies ranged from 0.1 to 0.5, which was small. Overall, the meta-analysis of this review indicates that the association between stress and cognition in older adults is a moderate association. Conclusions

----- The results of this review indicate that the strength of the association between stress and cognitive functioning in older adults is small, and that overall there is a weak association between stress and cognitive functioning. In addition, the results indicated that the association between stress and cognition is stronger among older individuals with a higher level of depressive symptoms, and that stress interacts with the association between depressive symptoms and cognition. Future studies should investigate the impact of stress on cognitive functioning and other health outcomes in older adults with varying levels of depressive symptoms. This study was funded by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research (Grant No. ILLU-73130).
